Accused of extortion

INVESTIGATORS for State's Atty. Bernard Carey arrested a Chicago Heights water department supervisor and charged him with intimidating the operator of a restaurant fashion show into making shakedown payments.

The arrested man, Paul A. Palcek, 60, had reportedly boasted of his connections with deceased crime-syndicate leader Frank LaPorte. Investigators using $300 in marked currency charged him with shaking down Leslie Mantia, 26, who with her brother John operates Look of Love Fashion Shows from offices in south suburban Burbank.

Palcek was arrested in the Sulky Club Restaurant, 18320 S. Halsted, Homewood, where Miss Mantia was staging one of her fashion shows, Carey's chief investigator Robert Cavanaugh said. Carey aides said Miss Mantia came to them Aug. 2 with a complaint that Palcek had demanded weekly payoffs of $75 in order for her to continue holding the shows. They said Palcek had told her that no one operates in the south suburban area without permission from the syndicate.

ORGANIZED CRIME ACTIVITY AND POLITICAL CORRUPTION
CHICAGO HEIGHTS, ILLINOIS

The following is a summary of information concerning captioned matter, which is in addition to information previously reported.

POLICE CORRUPTION

In 1974, two former Chicago Heights Police Officers alleged that they were fired on trumped-up charges for their efforts in trying to expose gambling locations in Chicago Heights, Illinois. There was ample evidence, whether real or trumped-up, to support the firing of the officers, and no substantial corroboration other than rumors of the allegation could be determined.

[redacted] well known Chicago Heights strip joint operator, alleged to be in prostitution on a large scale, has been arrested on several occasions by the Chicago Heights Police Department, but has received no substantial convictions. The last arrest was on March 16, 1974, when he was arrested for Aggravated Battery-Assault With A Gun. He was charged with a misdemeanor. Although [redacted] was arrested, no fingerprints or photographs were obtained and there was no record of the arrest on the prisoner log. b6 b7C

In 1974, a Chicago Heights Police Officer reported the location of a house of prostitution in Chicago Heights, operated by [redacted] and alleged that [redacted]'s strip joing was a center for prostitution. This allegation has been rampant for years in the Chicago Heights area. The officer also identified the location of a poker game. He further alleged [redacted] is a bag man for the syndicate and that [redacted] controls the entire Chicago Heights Police Department. He alleged [redacted] tipped certain gamblers about a raid, see Infra, at 259 East 22nd Street. No corroboration of these allegations was ever obtained. b6 b7C

GAMBLING

Over the years, there have been numerous reports of horserace bookmaking and other gambling in the Chicago Heights area. There have been numerous raids by local authorities on poker games and dice games in the area, resulting in a substantial number of arrests. The vast majority of these arrests have resulted in no convictions. For example, Rossi's Pool Hall, 259 East 22nd Street, Chicago Heights, Illinois, has been raided by the Cook County Sheriff's Office, and the Illinois Bureau of Investigation, based upon information obtained from the FBI. The last was in March, 1974, where ten persons were arrested including [redacted] alleged hoodlum, however, there were no convictions. In 1974, based upon information from the FBI, the Cook County Sheriff's Office, raided the residence of [redacted], in Chicago Heights, and seized 25 slot machines. The local court found [redacted] not guilty although the search warrant involved was not substantially challenged. The court ordered the slot machines returned and at last report, the States Attorney's Office still had the matter on appeal.

EXTORTION

In 1974, [redacted] from Chicago Heights, a former associate and driver for the late, [redacted] was arrested and convicted by local authorities for a shake down of a fashion show owner. [redacted] made statements he was a syndicate representative.

SUBJECT: PROPOSED INFORMANT GATHERING OPERATION-SOUTH RA

(OO: CHICAGO)

The purpose of this operation, is to define and identify the organized criminal element in the South Suburbs. At the present time, the intelligence information in the "Green Book" is woefully inadequate and outdated. No accurate information is available to identify the criminal hierarchy as it now exists in the South Suburbs. Chicago investigations to date, indicate that Albert Pilotto, alleged head of the south side LCN family, possibly has other functions within LCN hierarchy of Chicago, and does not concern himself with the day to day activity in the South Suburbs.

To obtain the above goal, it will be necessary to improve the informant coverage within the South RA. At present, no network of criminal informants has been developed, which could shed light on the present criminal community operating within the South RA. No information is available to determine who is doing what, when, where, or how.

At the present time, there are four target cases within the South RA, which by their very nature, demand informant coverage to insure a successful conclusion. The three cases are as follows:

The proposed operation will be conducted in three phases as follows:

Phase #1:

1. Identify participants-both LCN members and other major criminal figures.

2. Obtain current photograph and biographical data on each individual identified. Leads to be assigned by target hoodlum to team member.

Phase #2:

1. Identify peripherial players as possible criminal informants (PCI).

2. Contact all identified PCIs and attempt through contact and interview to obtain informant coverage in South RA. It should be noted that possible criminal prosecutions could be developed against PCIs in an effort to obtain leverage, with which to gain cooperation. Leads to be assigned by target PCI to team member.

Phase #3:

1. Through completion of Phases #1 and #2 the operation team will develop a plan of attack on hierarchy of criminal community in south suburbs for criminal prosecutions with an eye toward three target cases previously mentioned.

2. Present program to Strike Force, Chicago, and obtain committment to develop plan of systematic prosecutions aimed at major criminal figures within the South RA.

Manpower:

In conjunction with the new "Target Approach" in the OC Program, and the fact that Squad #16 is responsible for selecting OC targets within the south suburbs of Chicago, it is recommended this operation be supervised by Supervisor [redacted] b6 b7C [redacted] Squad #16, and include the following Agents:

SA [redacted] (SOUTH RA)
SA [redacted] (SQUAD #16)
SA [redacted] (SQUAD #16)
SA [redacted] (SOUTH RA)

The operation will be conducted for a period of 90 days, with progress to be monitored and reviewed by Squad #16 Supervisor every 30 days.

Equipment:

It is anticipated that photographic equipment can be obtained from the South RA and Chicago Office to implement Phase #1. Additional equipment needs will be evaluated as the situation dictates.

Administrative:

Phase #1 will be worked under CG 92-4275 (Crime Conditions-South RA). Phase #2 will be worked under [redacted] b7D [redacted] It will be necessary to reopen CG 92-4275 and open the Sub S file of [redacted]

Chicago mobsters make suburbs their home

By Jim Wisuri

When mob muscleman Billy Dauber was gunned down four weeks ago as he returned to his Will County home, many observers were reminded of the words of the late Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley.

Reporters once asked "da Mare" about Mafia operations in Chicago. Daley replied that there was no mob in Chicago — the gangsters all had moved to the suburbs.

Chicago retains an international reputation as a haven for mobsters because of the infamous "Roaring '20s" exploits of Al Capone's gang. To dismiss Windy City mob activity as non-existent seems ridiculous. However, Daley was partially right. Most of the big boys in local rackets do live in the suburbs.

Since Beverly Hills has its Gray Line tour of the homes of Hollywood stars and Nashville buses cruise a route of Grand Ole Opry luminaries, Suburban Sun-Times presents the Chicago suburbs' version with a tour of mobsters' homes:

We begin at a site that carries a trace of nostalgia: the parking lot in the 4800 block of Cermak Road in Cicero, the former site of the Hawthorn Hotel. The Hawthorn was Capone's ruling base. The building burned down years ago, but since some of the modern gang's leaders began their careers under Capone, the lot symbolizes an appropriate starting point for the trip.

Helping as a guide for the journey is lawyer William K. Lambie, a former FBI agent from Glen Ellyn who serves as associate director of the Chicago Crime Commission.

From Capone's old haunts, we wind our way to the south suburbs, of which Chicago Heights is the power base for such mob activities as chop-shop (stolen-auto-parts) operations, gambling, prostitution, juice loans and labor racketeering. All of this sin isn't necessarily located in Chicago Heights, but the two reputed leaders of the area's crime-syndicate activities call the city home.

For Al Pilotto, 390 W. 11th Pl. in Chicago Heights, the city means family ties. As the tour bus cruises past 11th Place, one can see that Pilotto's brown-brick abode is the only home on the block. Pilotto has shared the two-story four-flat overlooking the Chicago Heights Country Club with his daughter, son-in-law and family.

Pilotto, president of the Laborers International Union Local 5, also stays close to his brother, Chicago Heights Police Chief Henry Pilotto, by living in the Heights. The labor leader who worked his way up from chauffeur and bodyguard for former south suburbs crime czar Frank LaPorte also has a condo in the far South: Saint Lucie County in Florida.

Just about a mile west of Pilotto's secluded palace stands the new residence of Billy Dauber's former boss, Albert Caesar Tocco. No one really knows which of the two allegedly has more control over south Cook County mob operations, Lambie says. The death of Dauber only means that Tocco, who has been convicted of rape and auto theft, will have to find another enforcer.

Besides the July 2 hit on hit man Dauber, Tocco has had more ordinary things to ponder. Mob watchers report that he has moved with his girl friend, Betty Klaff, to the modern, one-story brick home on the north side of 207th Street.

The large front yard with a lush weeping-willow tree complements the tan-and-beige brick structure. The mailbox lists the address as 2318 207th St., but one will see no name on the letter drop. That's a common trait among suburban mobsters.

Another characteristic of Tocco's new residence is its placement at an intersection. Gardner Avenue, in the unincorporated Olympia Gardens section of Chicago Heights, runs south from the home's front yard, which forms a T-intersection at Tocco's home. As we will see later in the tour, members of "The Outfit" seem to favor homes that border intersections.

From the Heights, the tour bus cruises northwest to Oak Brook, home of Joseph "Doves" Aiuppa. The aging and reportedly ailing graduate of the Capone gang allegedly has retired from full-time mob activity. However, his brick home at 4 Yorkshire Dr., bordering the East-West Tollway, still remains a meeting place for syndicate leaders, Lambie says.

Aiuppa's nickname stems from an early 1960s conviction for killing hundreds of mourning doves in Kansas. As one-time chief of Cicero rackets and former No. 2 man for Chicago, he allegedly — as the book "Who Runs Chicago?" puts it — "has gone after even bigger game in his time."

From Oak Brook, it's just a hop, skip and a sputter of the exhaust system to Hillside for a glimpse at another corner residence. William "Butch" Petrocelli Jr. reportedly has lived in the one-story wood-paneled home at 342 Forest for several years.

Petrocelli, though arrested numerous times, was convicted only on a 1957 cartage-theft charge. Petrocelli is best known as the alleged partner of Harry Sam Aleman. Aleman, now in solitary confinement in Atlanta, reputedly served as the local mob's No. 1 hit man.

From the modest home of a man often listed as a member of "the Young Turks," a group of younger gangsters who supposedly want more mob say-so, our tour travels to another near west suburb — River Forest, home of Numero Uno: Tony Accardo.

Accardo, like Aiuppa an alumnus of the Capone-era mob, ranks as the modern-day supreme commander or the local syndicate's chairman of the board, Lambie says. After unsuccessful attempts during the last year to relocate in Northbrook's Mission Hills and Oak Brook's Ginger Creek, "Joe Batters" Accardo has returned to River Forest.

However, this time, instead of the magnificent digs he once owned at 914 Franklin and 1407 N. Ashland (a corner home), Accardo has gone condo. The mob's reputed top dog, who has never gone to jail, now resides at 1417 Bonnie Brae.

THE MOB IN THE SUBURBS

The local boss is something of a constitutional expert. He once pleaded the Fifth Amendment 144 times before a congressional committee.

Accardo acquired his nickname because of his reputed penchant for using baseball bats on people who had trouble understanding what he was trying to tell them, Lambie says. Since Capone's former bodyguard has neighbors in the four-story building, presumably his swinging days are over. He likes to spend winters in ritzy Palm Springs, Calif.

Like Tocco and Pilotto, Accardo lives about a mile from another reputed mob heavy: Jackie "The Lackey" Cerone. Cerone, an avid golfer who at age 66 maintains about a 4-handicap, lives in a classy tan-and-black brick home on the corner of Armitage and 77th Avenue in Elmwood Park.

Cerone allegedly serves as the general manager of The Outfit's day-to-day activities. In the early '70s he served time in a federal penitentiary after conviction for his role in an interstate sports-gambling ring.

As one can see from the bus, the crisp canvas awnings, heavy shrubbery, black cyclone fence and second house in the backyard give the Cerone residence the feel of a castle.

While the trees and heavy shrubbery surrounding Cerone's home add the aura of seclusion seemingly so desired by reputed underworld leaders, the larger estates available in south Lake County offer even more privacy.

As the bus leaves the Tri-State Tollway for Half Day Road, one can see heavily wooded lots that offer cloistered living, free from the public eye.

South of Lincolnshire is Riverwoods, home of two of the area's top reputed organized-crime figures, who also live within a mile of one another.

As we tool slowly south on Hoffman Lane, we approach another T-intersection. If we turn right, the bus will veer onto tiny Whigham Lane, which leads to a dead-end street. If we turn left, we'll enter the driveway of Allen Dorfman, whose house is barely perceptible from the road. Insurance man Dorfman was convicted in 1972 for his part in a felony kickback scheme involving the Teamsters Union pension fund.

Less than a mile to the southeast is the secluded home of Victor Spilotro, whose conviction record dates back to 1953 and includes guilty verdicts on charges of burglary and receiving stolen property.

Local cops turn backs on kingpins

By Jim Wisuri

Many of the Chicago area's reputed organized-crime figures live in the suburbs, but local police departments seldom keep close track of their whereabouts because of manpower and money constraints.

"I think that most (police departments) feel they have some obligation to know something," says William K. Lambie, associate director of the Chicago Crime Commission. "But they have neither the cause nor the resources to keep tabs on (reputed mobsters)."

Though Sam "Momo" Giancana, one-time kingpin of Chicago's syndicate, was rubbed out by five shots to the throat June 19, 1975, in his Oak Park home, most mob homesteads are free from such grisly events.

Top syndicate honchos control vice activities such as gambling, prostitution, drug sales and chop-shop (stolen-auto-parts) operations, but the dangerous work involved usually is performed by underlings, law-enforcement officials say.

"High-level organized-crime figures are not going to be carrying on these activities in their own backyard," says Charles Doerr, public-information officer for the Illinois Department of Law Enforcement's Crestwood office. "They're not an immediate danger to the areas they live in."

Police in suburbs known as home to reputed syndicate chieftains say the presence of gangsters doesn't disrupt the community.

"We have no problems with them," says Elmwood Park Police Chief Dewey Paoletti. "We have no gambling, no numbers game, no strip joints, no massage parlors. You can't even sell Playboy magazine on a newsstand here."

However, Chicago police sometimes notify Elmwood Park that they want to stake out homes in the village of reputed "Outfit" leaders such as Jackie "the Lackey" Cerone and Dominic Cortina, Paoletti says.

Chicago Heights Police Lt. Kenneth Johnson agrees with Paoletti that suburban police departments don't have the troops or time to shadow suspected top mobsters.

Chicago Heights police concentrate on actual law violations and not reports of reputed mobsters who are "generally considered" to control local rackets, Johnson says.

Much like Elmwood Park, Chicago Heights police co-operate with outside law-enforcement agencies when they investigate reputed syndicate leaders such as Al Pilotto and Albert Caesar Tocco, Johnson adds.

Of Tocco and Pilotto, generally considered the overseers of south suburban mob interests, Johnson says, "I've never known either one of them to violate a law."

The suburbs act as a sanctum for the men who allegedly make their livings by capitalizing on the weaknesses of others.

For instance, Elmwood Park Chief Paoletti says of Cerone: "I could probably pass him by on the street and I wouldn't recognize him."

Chicago mobsters call suburbs home

Spilotro's brother Anthony reputedly is a big wheel with the Las Vegas interests of the local mob and both were principals with the Western Messenger Service. Western Messenger was an off-track betting operation that opened as a "private club" after the Illinois Supreme Court ruled in 1978 that messenger services could be banned.

About 15 minutes to the west in the sylvan village of Kildeer resides the last reputed gangster on our tour. Joseph Ferriola lives at 22249 White Pine Rd. in a modern, two-tone brick ranch house.

Ferriola allegedly has led the Young Turks faction since the 1979 death of Cicero's James "Turk" Torello. The Kildeer resident also was convicted at the same time as Cerone for involvement with the interstate gambling ring.

As the alleged kingpin of mob activities for the west and northwest suburbs, Ferriola, 53, reputedly sits in The Outfit councils that convene at Aiuppa's Oak Brook home.

As we head back to Cicero, consider Lambie's heartwarming story about Ferriola, a guy willing to help the down-and-out.

THE MOB IN THE SUBURBS

Former Lake County Sheriff Orville "Pat" Clavey was convicted in 1976 for income-tax fraud and perjury in a case involving shakedowns of tavern owners. Clavey, coming from a leading political family in Lake County, saw his public-service career go down the tubes.

When it came time for Clavey to get out of the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Chicago on a work-release program, Ferriola gave the former sheriff a job with his vending-machine firms in Mundelein.

However, federal probation officials soon realized that a convicted felon shouldn't be working for another convicted felon. Clavey was transferred to another employer.

The suburbs are home to some of the Chicago area's most notorious reputed mobsters. Pictured above (from top) are Joseph Ferriola, Jackie "The Lackey" Cerone and Albert Casser Tocco with their plush homes in Riverside, Elmwood Park and Chicago Heights.
